TEACHING STORY SHAPE

Pulling stories apart, seeing how they work & then constructing new ones

For teachers 3–7

Presented by Geoff Havel,*

Children’s Author, Primary Teacher & Contributor to ‘Writing {better} stories’, published by PETA

How do I get the most out of my students in a classroom of vastly different learners? How do I foster and nurture great storytelling in a student whose spelling and grammar isn’t at the same level as their classmates? Participate in a day of modelled lessons and activities demonstrating ways of teaching children, with a wide range of learning styles, to write. Get students editing their work and consciously using language effectively. Look at the educational principles behind each strategy and discuss other possible ways of achieving the same outcomes. Leave at the end of the day with outcomes-based narrative and poetry programs to use in your classrooms.
